The Myth of Detente

Promoted by the Soviet Union and the United States, the artillery fire Angolans are using to kill each other has reduced to rubble the myth of detente.

It's always been difficult to tell what detente was all about. All the American people had to go on was what Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told them. Cultural exchange groups were supposed to be signs of detente even while the Soviets were elusive about strategic arms limitations.

Kissinger's brainchild of detente has finally been aborted. Instead the cold war has been reborn. The immediate cause lies with those nations that have intervened in the Angolan civil war with troops and equipment, including the United States, the Soviet Union and South Africa.

The irony is that the United States must admit that it has no real interest in preventing the Marxist Popular Front (MPLA) from assuming control in Angola. The Ford Administration, meaning Kissinger, automatically reacted to the presence of Russian advisers in Angola with secret military aid for the factions which oppose the MPLA.

While Kissinger and the Soviets have been giving lip service to detente, old-fashioned maneuvering post-World War II style is still going on in the developing nations.

Detente was an exercise in self-deception. Everyone fell for it except the Russian navy. It has taken over as the most powerful in the world.

The Organization of African (OAU) is meeting in Ethiopia to resolve the Angolan civil war. In all probability it will ask for the fighting to stop and negotiations to create a new government.

The war will probably drag on because the MPLA doesn't want to compromise. All the United States can do is leave because it has already done all the damage it can. Worst of all may be that its relations with the African nations is in a shambles for siding with South Africa in Angola.

The Russians can't ask for much more than to have the United States allied with apartheid South Africa. This could be the realization of their mission in Angola.

Kennedy Recognizes The GSU

Angola Bowl

by Art Hoppe

"We can live with any of the factions in Angola and we would never have given assistance to any of the other factions if other great powers had stayed out of this"—Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"Good morning. I'm from the U.S. State Department. And you, I assume, are Humberto McReily, head of the dread TGIF, which stands for The Popular Front to Liberate Mbonga?"

"How did you know? We just started this civil war 28 minutes ago."

"Oh, we've kept a close eye on you. You see, you're our first round draft pick here in Mbonga."

"Your what?"

"Draft pick. It's all due to that mess in Angola. Because the Russians picked one side, we and the South Africans and the Red Chinese wound up together on the other which was most embarrassing to all three of us."

"I can certainly see that."
"And what if the Russians had picked the same side the rest of us did? What kind of war would that have been?"
"Terrible."
"Right. Over in a minute. So to bring order out of chaos, we, the Russians and the Chinese have signed a tripartite pack establishing a system for drafting movements whenever a civil war breaks out."

"And you drafted our TGIF movement? How come you got first pick?"

"Because we had the worst win-loss record."

"Just our luck."

"Think of it as tribute to the fighting spirit of the TGIF. By the bye, would you mind changing your name to the Mbonga Tigers? The folks back home get confused over which initials to root for. Are you Utopian Socialists or Anarchosyndicalists?"

"No, we're cannibals."
"I must be thinking of your Russian-backed opposition, the BBDO or United Mbongan Freedom Movement."
"No, they're basically laissez-faire head-hunters."
"Well, it doesn't make such difference does it? Now, if you'll just sign this one-year contract, you'll receive a $1 million bonus in mortars, rockets and flame throwers."
"A million? That's peanuts. I'll hold out for a higher bid."

"From whom? This draft system is saving us big powers billions. For either you play ball with the guys that draft you, mac, or you don't play ball at all."

"Gosh, I guess you've got us over a barrel all right. Civil wars just aren't what they used to be, are they?"

"Nonsense. You'll be surprised at how many of your fellow Mbongans you can slaughter for $1 million. Now we want you to get out there, kid, with your mortars, rockets and flame throwers and show those Russians they can't intimidate us. Any questions?"

"Yeah. Is there another league we could jump to?"

Meet Mr. Average: A 21-year-old Business Major From LA County

Meet Mr. Average Cal Poly:

He is 21 years old and comes from Los Angeles County. He lives in San Luis Obispo while attending Poly. His major is business administration. He carries a load of 14.5 units.

And he is probably looking for a girlfriend, judging by the ratio of men to women at this university.

According to a 20-page report released over vacation by L. H. Dunigan, director of Institutional Research here, 63.7 per cent of all Cal Poly students are men. The other 36.3 per cent, of course, are women.

While still unbalanced, this is, nevertheless, quite an improvement—from a male's perspective—over the men-women ratio of 1960 when just 17.5 per cent of the students body was comprised of coeds.

Mr. Average was created from a concoction of facts compiled by Dunigan and his staff and published in a yearly report.

Dunigan's report provides statistics pertaining to a host of trends in enrollment and student characteristics, ranging from study loads to state funding for Cal Poly.

Copies of the report were issued to all instructional department heads, the President's Council, the Academic Council, the Administrative Council and Student Personnel Council.

The report said the median age for males here is 21, while for women it is 20. There are nearly 10,000 students out of a total enrollment of about 15,000 in the 18-23 age bracket.

When the age factor was last tallied in fall of 1974, there were 108 students 35 years of age or older.

Some 19.6 per cent of the students here hail from Los Angeles County, according to the Dunigan report. The next county claiming the most Cal Poly students is San Luis Obispo, which contributes 14 per cent of the students here. Santa Barbara is next with 7.7 per cent followed by Santa Clara County with 6.8 per cent.

But while students migrate from the northern and southern reaches of the state to attend Poly, once they get here they usually settle down in San Luis Obispo for the duration.

According to the latest study in fall of 1975, 60 per cent of the students here choose—or are lucky enough—to live in San Luis Obispo. Another 19.4 per cent make the residence halls their homes. The remaining 20 per cent are scattered from Lompoc to Cambria.

Los Osos seems to be the most popular of the out-of-town communities. About 3.5 per cent of Cal Poly's student body live there. Once students get settled in a place to live, they really get down to the business of being a student—which, at this university, usually means studying business.

Only three students are enrolled in this field of study—the fewest students in any major offered at Poly.

The School of Agriculture and Natural Resources has lassoed the distinction of being the Biggest School here. Some 3,291 aggies fill its ranks. The School of Communicative Arts and Humanities is at the bottom of the heap with 1,164 students.

Dunigan's report also showed that Poly students tend to be a bit more industrious than their peers at other state colleges and universities.

A Child's

Goes Up

In Smoke

A fireman wades through a smoky haze Sunday afternoon, caused by a grass fire on the hills near Laurel Lane and Johnson Ave. The fire caused more fear than damage as flames burned $1,000 worth of grazing land and threatened several San Luis Obispo homes. Northwest winds made the fire especially treacherous. It was first reported at 3 p.m. and it took a crew of 50-60 men, two bulldozers and an air tanker six and a half hours to put out. The potentially disastrous blaze was started by children...playing with matches. (Daily photo).

14,817 Register For Winter Quarter Here

Winter quarter registration saw 14,817 students register for classes at Cal Poly according to the final computer count.

The figure was short 321 students who didn't return from the final fall quarter count of 15,138. Compared with last year's winter total of 14,007, this year's enrollment increased 6 per cent.

The count is of all students, part-time or full-time, who registered. It shouldn't be confused with full-time equivalent students which is the total number of units taken by the total student count, divided by 12.

Full-time equivalent figures, on which the university compares projected enrollment ceilings will not be computed until the census date, the end of the third week after students complete schedule adjustments.

The official count replaces the tentative count of 14,690, a hand count taken during registration.

Students Who Drop Out Early Can Now Get Refund

Students withdrawing from all their classes within 14 days of registration, will now receive a 100 per cent refund of ASI and University Union fees.

Effective immediately, this new policy is more liberal than the old system now printed in the class schedule. Previously, refunds were made according to decreasing percentages through the tenth day of instruction for student body card and through the third week of instruction for the Union fee.

ASI and University Union fees will be refunded in full for application made on or before Jan. 20, 1976 for the Winter Quarter 1976.

If a student applies for withdrawal within the third week of instruction he will be refunded 25 per cent of the UU fee.

This will be allowed during the Winter Quarter 1976 only.

In the future refunds will be made only to students who withdraw from the University within 14 days of registration.

All refunds will be handled through the University Union cashiers.

GSU Gains University Recognition

It took five years of struggle, but the Gay Students Union here has been brought out of the closet and given official university recognition as a Cal Poly organization.

A legal opinion by the state Attorney General swung the final battle of the five-year war between the GSU and University Pres. Robert Kennedy in the gay group's favor.

Kennedy, who was a strong opponent of the group for what he said were legal, and not moral, reasons, Friday approved the GSU bylaws.

The president has said before on numerous occasions he was fighting the GSU on legal grounds, but that an opinion from the Attorney General—which he requested—condoning acceptance of the group would cause him to change his decision.

That decision came late last week:

"The legal opinion makes it quite clear that as a result recent changes made in the bylaws subsequent to the Superior Court case in March, 1973 and the Appellate Court in June 1974 (the site of two legal battles involving GSU acceptance), I no longer have any legally-sustainable basis for non-recognition."

GSU president Ron Pursley, naturally, was pleased with the latest and possibly final turn of events in the saga of the Gay group.

"I am relieved that the fight is over," he said, adding that he knew it would end this way but was sorry it had to take five years.

Pursley said the group will now begin to concentrate more on consolidation rather than recognition.

GSU Acceptance: Some Like It, Others Do not

by JANET McBRIEN
Daily Staff Writer

Official recognition of the Gay Students Union at Cal Poly has brought with it an accompanying barrage of opinions from campus and religious leaders.

Expressing the most negative reaction to the homosexual group's official existence was Dr. John Boswell, Pastor of Grace Church, San Luis Obispo, who said, "The organization has no place in our society or our school system." The minister defines homosexuality as a sin, not a sickness or form of sexuality.

Voicing a differing view was Cal Poly counselor Nancy Jorgensen.

"I'm delighted," claimed Jorgensen, who serves as the faculty advisor to the GSU. "They deserve to be treated as any group who has followed the proper procedures leading to official recognition."

"Most people seem to fear that the group will proselytize, and that's definitely a myth," continued the counselor. "They're just a group of people who banded together to raise consciousness and provide support for one another."

Seconding Jorgensen's opinion was Mike Hurtado, president of the Associated Student Body, Inc.

"I've always felt the GSU should have been recognized right from the beginning," he said. "No one should be in the position to make moral decisions for others. I feel the question should have been one of legality right from the start and in the end that's how it was dealt with."

Lack of knowledge kept Athletic Director Victor Buccola from commenting on the case.

J. Cordner Gibson, dean of the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources also voiced his doubt of the correctness of Pres. Robert E. Kennedy's decision to legalize the GSU.

"My personal moral standards are such I might think they shouldn't have been recognized, but I can't argue with the attorney general's legal opinion," said Gibson. "Legally I'm sure recognition was the only answer."

'Beatlemania'

"Beatlemania" will come alive again tonight as three screenings of film clips covering "Ten Years with the Beatles," many of the clips never viewed before, will be shown in Santa Maria.

The assorted black-and-white and color clips, including the Beatle's first U.S. appearance and their 1965 Shea Stadium concert, will be shown at 5, 8 and 11 p.m. in the Santa Maria Theatre.

Tickets are on sale, $3.50 in advance and $4 at the door, and may be picked up at the Record Exchange, Boo Boo Records and at Brown's Music Store. The screenings are being presented by Moonstar Euphoria, Inc., a Los Angeles based firm.

Russian Hailed

PARIS UPI - Soviet scientist Andrei Sakharov hailed Monday the release of fellow dissident Leonid Plyushch as a victory in the campaign to liberalize the Soviet regime and vowed to continue his fight.

In an interview in Moscow with Luxembourg radio and television, the father of the Soviet atom bomb said a telephone call from the Plyushch family was the first he has been allowed to receive from abroad since Dec. 20.

Sakharov, who was forbidden to leave the Soviet Union to pick up his Nobel Prize in Oslo, Norway, said he was no longer able to telephone his friends in Italy or elsewhere.

Watermelon Contest

A watermelon eating contest will be held Thursday, Jan. 15, during College Hour in the University Union Plaza.

The event is open to all students, and interested persons need only show up and pay the 50 cents entry fee to enter the competition. Prizes will be awarded for the contest, which is being sponsored by the Recreation and Tournament Committee (RAT).

Library Tours

Staff members of Cal Poly's Dexter Library are offering tours throughout this week for students who would like to learn to utilize the library to its fullest.

The daily tours are scheduled for 11 a.m. and 2 and 4 p.m. through Friday. Interested students should meet in the foyer of the library.

Further information may be obtained by contacting the reference desk of the library at 546-2340.

Malpractice Talk

Dr. Billy Mounts, director of health services at Cal Poly, will discuss the malpractice situation during a talk Thursday, Jan. 15 at 11 a.m. in the Health Center conference room.

Mounts, also president of the County Medical Association, will be sponsored in his talk Thursday by Mu Delta Phi, a campus organization interested in the field of medicine.

His talk will be free to all interested persons, and those going to hear him speak should use the patio entrance of the Health Center.

Bombs Found In UN

UNITED NATIONS UPI - A package containing three pipe bombs was found Monday beneath a U.N. library near the scene of a formal Security Council debate on the Middle East. The bombs were timed to explode 30 minutes before the debate was scheduled to begin.

Police said the package was found at 11:30 a.m. EST — about three and half hours before it was set to explode — by a city electrician who was routinely checking a subway maintenance entrance located underneath a ramp leading to the U.N.'s Dag Hammarskjold Memorial Library.

Dietetics Club

A special guest speaker will highlight tonight's meeting of the Cal Poly Dietetics Club, 7 p.m. in the Living Room of the Mathematics and Home Economics Building.

Marjorie White, a registered dietician and Internship Director at UCLA will discuss internships for dietician students, and how to apply for them. The meeting is open to all dietetics and home economics majors.

Russia Low On Dough

MOSCOW UPI - Many rural areas across the Soviet Union have run short of bread and a number of government officials are under reprimand, an agricultural newspaper said Monday.

Western economists said it could be a result of last year's disastrous wheat harvest.

"The low harvest is probably resulting in a slower supply response to demand" in rural areas, one economist said.

The Soviet Union harvested an estimated 137 million tons of grain last year, the worst in more than a decade.

The newspaper Selskaya Zhizn Rural Life said officials in several areas had been reprimanded for failing to insure unbroken supplies of food and primary foodstuffs.

ASI Secretary Needed

The Associated Students, Inc., is conducting a search for a new secretary to replace Kathy Carlson, who recently resigned her post.

Applications for the position may be obtained from and returned to Shari Christian, ASI executive secretary in Rm. 217A of the University Union.

The position, which pays $60 a month, will be held by the new secretary until the next election, which will be held in May.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Christian either in her office or by phoning 546-1291 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Applications for the position should be returned no later than Friday, Jan. 16.

Mail Bombs Miss

SAN FRANCISCO UPI - Police guarded San Francisco's mayor and 11 supervisors around the clock Monday after bombs were mailed to two of the supervisors.

Targets of the bombs, which were concealed in packages of candy, were Supervisors John Barbagelata and Quentin Kopp. The bombs were delivered by the post office Saturday, but both were defused before they could explode.

Police Capt. Jeremiah Taylor said it was "sheer luck" that the bombs did not explode. They were powerful enough to have killed anyone in the same room at the time of an explosion. Two of Barbagelata's children had been playing with the package before demolition experts opened it.

Authorities had no clues to the senders, but they speculated that the lethal devices might have been mailed by the New World Liberation Front, an underground terrorist group. The day the bombs were mailed the terrorists had sent a thinly veiled death threat to all supervisors, demanding adequate health care for the poor. Copies of the letter were received by the news media. The NWLF did not claim responsibility for the bombs, however.

In the past bombings claimed by the group had been intended only to destroy property and had not been directed against individuals.

Kopp found the package in his mailbox Saturday morning and carried it around in his car until 5 p.m., when he carried it into his office at the city hall. His administrative assistant started to unwrap the package and saw some metal. Kopp called police, who sent demolition experts.

OAU Nears Decision

ADDIS ABABA UPI - Vice President Daniel Arab Moi of Kenya said Monday the Organization of African Unity emergency summit was "nearing a compromise" on how to end the fighting in Angola.

"The main thing now is to save the OAU," one conference source said.

The compromise resolution calls for the withdrawal of South African troops from Angola to be followed by a ceasefire. South African troops are fighting with the pro-Western National Front for the Liberation of Angola and the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola.

The proposed resolution also calls for an end to all foreign intervention in Angola. It does not specifically name the Soviet Union and Cuba which have helped the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

Passage of the compromise resolution would be a diplomatic defeat for the MPLA, which wanted OAU recognition of the government it has set up in the Angolan capital of Luanda.

The proposed compromise incorporates clauses from two opposing resolutions up for a vote.

'Chief Ed' Device: Smooth Scaling For Smokers

by STEVE CHURM
Daily Associate Editor

Los Angeles — The great enforcer of Los Angeles statutes, outspoken Police Chief Ed Davis has been bestowed with a new honor.

You can now purchase through the mail your very own, official, guaranteed accurate "Chief Ed," marijuana pocket scale.

A Culver City based mail-order company, Chief Ed Corporation is selling identical scales to the ones Davis is arming his police force with in the wake of the revised marijuana law that took affect, Jan. 1.

The scales will be used by California law enforcement officials to measure the quantity of cannabis on a suspected possessor.

The decriminalization of pot by the state legislature makes possession of less than an ounce punishable by citation only, much like a traffic ticket, with a maximum fine of $100.

To promote the $1.75 scale, which includes a "handy carry pouch" to transport the proper quantity of stash, and membership into the "Chief Ed" club, a demonstration was held in a highly unlikely setting.

Paul Maurin, 20 and Steve Ryne, 19, co-owners of the four week old company, held a "scale accuracy" demonstration on the steps of the Los Angeles Police Department, Parker Center Monday morning.

The demonstration entailed a brief description of the product, its "useful service to the liberation of pot," and an actual weighing of 25 grams of pot, (28 grams is one ounce).

David Jensen also of Culver City was the human guinea pig, as he held his "Chief Ed," and the controversial weed before snapping cameras and a tidal wave of questions.

"Yes, I am nervous, very nervous," the blonde Jensen said.

"But I feel I am helping to promote a necessary tool in our battle to maintain an even keel with Chief Davis and his men," Jensen added. The two owners of the infant company concurred with Jensen's assessment of the event.

"The sale of the Chief Ed will help put the average citizen on even foothold and that is our purpose to maintain an even balance between the police in this city and the citizens they deal with," Maurin said.

Ryne added, "We strongly feel the citizen should protect himself from illogical prosecution and be prepared."

Both Ryne and Maurin admitted that although they are providing a public service their intentions for marketing the scales are not purely idealistic.

"The scales are purchased in Yonkers, New York, from the House of Rip, at 75 cents each. But by the time they package them, ship them west and we redistribute them to our customers through the mail we have to charge $1.75.

Concert Review

Bishop Gets Job Done

Concerts are a lot like wine. There are all kinds. Last Saturday night's Elvin Bishop performance in Chumash Auditorium was like a bottle of Red Mountain, just good enough to get the job done.

In the first of two shows, Bishop and his talented band were entertaining when they were on the stage, but they weren't out there very much. Bishop, who was apparently saving himself for the second show, didn't play enough music to cut a 45.

However, when he was playing he had the hungry Poly crowd moving to his powerful rock sounds. There weren't any lulls to his performance. He used a fast pace and an effective mixture of old and new material to keep the festival seated crowd with him.

Bishop lacks the charisma of many rock stars and he has to rely mainly on his skills as a musician to keep a live audience rolling. His few attempts at humor were just that—attempts.

Bishop closed out his performance with "Traveling Shoes" in a number that brought the crowd to its feet to stay. The band then came back out for an encore to do a version of Bill Haley's "Shake, Rattle and Roll." The song has had better tributes paid to it.

In the evening's first act, Canned Heat did its thing and they did it well. The group which is well known for their appearance at Woodstock in the sixties, played many of their old hits to ignite the crowd.

"Going up the country," "On The Road Again," and "Together We Stand" all received big crowd responses. Canned Heat played as long, if not longer, as the main attraction, Bishop.

Whether it is the Beatles at Shea Stadium, Springsteen at Santa Barbara, the Monkees at San Luis High, or Bishop at Chumash, most live music is entertaining. It is just too bad there wasn't more to listen to Saturday night.

Women Cagers Rip Tigers

The Cal Poly women's basketball team opened up its home season by doubling the score of the Occidental Tigers Saturday.

The Mustang varsity won 66-33 and they had little, if any, trouble in handling the Tigers. Oxy could not maintain control of the ball against the aggressive Cal Poly defense.

Poly shot 87 per cent from the floor for the game. Chris Kozik led all scorers with 14 points. Cindy Estrada and Sherry Fertitta had 13 and 12 points respectively.

In the junior varsity game, the Mustangs won easily, 45-21. Becky Puckett nabbed top scoring honors with 11 points.

Saturday's games were both non-conference. Occidental is not in the CCAA.

The varsity is currently 2-2 on the year. The J.V.'s are 1-3 as the Occidental game was their first win of the year.

Both the varsity and junior varsity will be in action Tuesday against UC Santa Barbara. The games are slated for 5 and 7 p.m. in Crandall Gym.

Track Coach Accepts New Job

Cal Poly's Steve Simmons was named the head track coach at Oregon State University over the weekend.

Simmons, who has been the track coach at Poly for the past five years, will take over his duties at Oregon State immediately. At this time no successor has been named to replace Simmons.

Dr. Victor Buccola, director of athletics, says it will be sometime before a new coach is hired. "We will have to go through normal university hiring procedures and it will take at least 30 days" said Buccola.

Assistant coach Eddie Cadena will assume responsibilities until a new coach is named.

Simmons came to Cal Poly in 1970 and in his first year he established a winning tradition that has typified Poly track teams ever since. Simmons received his Bachelor of Arts degree in Physical Education from Chapman college in 1965. He went on to get his Masters in P.E. from Cal Poly in 1973.

Before coming to Poly Simmons was an assistant at Chapman and also served as the triple jump coach for the U.S. Olympic Training Camp.

Simmons said he regrets leaving Cal Poly very much. "I have thoroughly enjoyed my five years at Poly and it was a tough decision for me to make," said Simmons. "It is tough to leave but a job like Oregon State's comes along once in a lifetime" said Simmons.

Simmons:

'It was a very tough

decision for me'

Cagers Breeze By Hayward; Host 'Sac' State Tonight

by DENNIS HALLADAY
Daily Staff Writer

The Cal Poly basketball squad will try to make it six straight wins at home when it meets Cal State Sacramento tonight at 8 p.m. for a non-conference game.

Poly coach Ernie Wheeler says that Sacramento has "as good talent as anybody in the Far Western Conference." Hornets Joel Garland, Russ Carlson and Julius Bolds combine for a 32.4 scoring average to lead the team.

It's games like the one the Mustangs had Saturday night that makes them realize how nice it is to play at home.

In their first game before home fans since Dec. 6, the Mustangs broke loose for 90 points and grabbed 63 rebounds in humbling Cal State Hayward, 90-62. Poly had beaten Hayward in its home gym Dec. 13 by just nine points.

Coach Wheeler and his group picked up their eighth win against three losses largely on the team's first half play that resulted in a 42-20 advantage at intermission.

Besides guard Gerald Jones tossing in 14 points in the half, it was post man Andre Keys' 16 rebounds that doomed Hayward. The Cal Poly defense was at its best, as it rattled the Pioneers into committing 16 turnovers. The Mustangs responded offensively by outscoring the visitors 12-2 on a pair of occasions.

Wheeler cleared his bench midway through the second half, probably to give the subs valuable playing time before conference play begins Jan. 23. Even with the subs in, though, Poly led by as many as 34 with 2:30 left to play.

Post man Dave Erickson led all scorers with 17 points, Jones finished with 16, Keys added 15 to go with his 20 rebounds, and post man Jeff Kerl took advantage of a rare starting opportunity to score 13. Post man Paul Mills finished with 14 rebounds.

"I thought we were much looser tonight," Wheeler said afterward. "We were very unselfish, we played well together. Our players just had great desire to go after the ball. If you want to score, you have to go after it."

Average: 21, Business Major

On the average, Poly students take three more units a quarter or semester than students at other campuses in the California State University and Colleges system. The average load here—as of 1975—is 14.5 units, while at the other 18 schools it is 11.4, the report said.

This trend has continued for a decade, at least. In 1965, 14.8 units were the average workload here, while students at the other campuses filled their schedules with 11.4 credit units of studying, according to Dunigan's report.

This difference is not caused by Poly's being on the quarter system. Quarter system schools require more units to graduate than semester schools to compensate for the extra study period.

Other data in the report revealed:

—State appropriation from Cal Poly has jumped from $5.5 million in 1960, to $36.8 million for this year. This figure includes both the money the state appropriates for the number of full-time equivalent students enrolled and the students' fees funnelled back to the school by the state.

—In the school year 1980-81, if ceilings are kept and projections met, there will be a total enrollment of 16,000. Most schools will grow slightly, enrollment-wise. The school of Business and Social Science will drop from 1,991 to 1,900. Meanwhile, the School of Engineering and Technology will jump from 2,593 to 2,850.
